

Virtual Design Manager to Enable IC Design Teams Continuous Improvement

In today's competitive semiconductor environment the schedule of an IC design team leader is burdened with a primary goal of getting projects done right, and on time. This leaves limited bandwidth for the essential continuous improvement activities that keep a team on the leading edge of productivity. In the continuing support of IC design team productivity Jorvig Consulting announces a new Virtual Design Manager offering to extend design managements capacity, permitting bandwidth for the vital continuous process improvement activities to be implemented.

Chandler, AZ (PRWeb) November 23, 2007 -- Numerous IC design leaders have a vision for improvements to the design process, however they lack the time to completely develop that vision into a reality. Jorvig Consulting today announces a new service to augment IC design team leadership, thereby allowing the indispensable focus on the crucial continuous process improvement activities.

The Virtual Design Manager service announced today brings about an economical design management partner solution available for design leaders, allowing the critical continuous improvements activities to be completed. This unique service provides design team leadership a path to delegate specific methodology development tasks to Jorvig Consulting; an organization that is highly experienced in developing IC design team processes and methods to enable predictable, productive project execution.

Jorvig Consulting brings a broad experience base in working with design team development processes. The retainer based Virtual Design Manager relationship provides cost-effective access to that vast experience base, permitting thorough planning and implementation of an organizations vision.

Jeff Jorvig, president of Jorvig Consulting Inc. said, "Managers know what they want to do to improve the teams execution, however they rarely have the time to reach full implementation due to more pressing revenue producing project tasks". The Virtual Design Manager service expands the capabilities of team leadership, allowing the appropriate focus on methodology activities to enable an organizations design team execution vision.
